Jumbles

They're flaunting their exceptional math grades online,
But in a red circle is a 79

I feel torn from friends making me spend time with them,
For I can't even say "Hi," to old friends anymore

Just why am I left out with friends I used to like.
Bet 'cause they laugh harder with girls I'm not alike

You can ask my friends what change they want to themselves,
And they will have those giant, unneeded bookshelves

I see the sweaters on their youtube hauls from Shein,
So I add the same ones to my cart on my screen

I smell scents from my screen they get paid to show off,
And I try them out even though they make me cough

Then I see influencers distorting their bodies,
But then why exactly do they praise self-love?

The weary, little problems make the drastic change,
My mind is all in jumbles from things weird and strange.
